

REMARKS

Claims 1, 4, 8, 9 and 10 have been amended to employ more idiomatic English. New claim 15 has been added to further scope the invention. No new matter has been entered.

The rejection of claims 1-3 and 8-10 under 35 USC §103 as obvious over Kasahara et al. (U.S. Patent 6,388,678) in view of Hashimoto (U.S. Patent 5,245,444), newly cited, and the rejection of claims 4-7 and 11-14 under 35 USC §103 as obvious from Kasahara et al. in view of Hashimoto et al. and further in view of Miller et al. (U.S. Patent 5,014,333) are in error.

Independent claim 1 specifies that the display device comprises a first input terminal for receiving an analog image signal and a second input terminal for receiving a digital image signal.

Neither Kasahara et al. nor Hashimoto nor Miller et al. teaches this feature. The primary reference, Kasahara et al., teaches a display apparatus with two inputs, one that receives R, G, B signals, and a second and a third input signals that receive a vertical synchronizing signal and a horizontal synchronizing signal, respectively (FIG. 9; col. 12, lines 16-20). Nowhere does Kasahara et al. teach or suggest a display apparatus that receives both an analog and a digital signal. Hashimoto does not supply the missing teachings. Hashimoto teaches an analog image signal only (FIG. 2). Thus, no combination of Kasahara et al. and Hashimoto can achieve or render obvious claim 1, nor any claims dependent therefrom.

Miller et al. is similarly deficient. Thus, no combination of Kasahara et al., Hashimoto, and Miller et al. could achieve or render obvious claim 1, or any of the claims dependent thereon.

Turning to the rejection of dependent claims 4-7 and 11-14 under 35 USC §103 as obvious Kasahara et al. in view of Hashimoto in further view of Miller et al. (U.S.

Patent 5,014,333), these claims are patentable for the reasons adduced above, as well as for their own limitations.

New claim 15 has been added to further scope the invention.

Having dealt with all the objections raised by the Examiner, the Application is believed to be in order for allowance.
